QUEEN SCORES INDIVIDUAL HIT

Mrs. Ruth Tevis Spencer Received an Ovation at Indianapolis Last Night

DAUGHTER OF DR. TEVIS

Young Lady Said to Possess a Flexible Soprano Voice of Rich, Mellow Quality

Mrs. Ruth Tevis Spencer, daughter of Dr. V. W. Tevis, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church here, scored an individual hit last night in "Queen Esther," at Tomlinson hall in Indianapolis.

The Indianapolis Star says today of the cantata:

The second presentation of the cantata, "Queen Esther" by the Roberts Park Choral Society, under the direction of Edward Taylor, attracted an appreciative audience to Tomlinson Hall last night. The reception for Mrs. Arnold Spencer, who represented Queen Esther, amounted almost to an ovation. The quality of her singing and her stage presence combined to gain for her the sincerest praise. Through the failure of the management to place corrected programs in the hands of those attending, many obtained the erroneous impression that Mrs. Kimball sang the part of the queen, as her name appeared in the programs instead of that of Mrs. Spencer.

The Indianapolis Sun says: The part of Queen Esther, which was to have been taken by Mrs. Charles Farrow Kimball, was sung by Mrs. Spencer, who undertook the task at a very late moment, which fact stands greatly to the credit of her excellent performance. Mrs. Spencer is the lucky possessor of a high and flexible soprano of mellow quality and beside that she knows how to sing and understands stage acting. Unquestionably she was the star of the evening.

OLDEST RESIDENT HAS SMALL-POX

Disease Developed When Epidemic was Thought to Have Died Out at Fountaintown

Just as the smallpox epidemic was dying out in Fountaintown, the oldest resident in the place, "Grandma" Cross, has taken the disease, the discovery being made yesterday. The aged lady is in her ninetieth year and, on account of her age, the disease may result fatally. There are, at present, only two houses that are not under quarantine.

NEW NINE HOUR LAW GONE INTO EFFECT

Heretofore there have been two operators and each worked twelve hours every day. A. C. Hasket, formerly agent at Griffins Station, has been added to the force to take the third shift.

ANXILIARY HOLD VERY INTERESTING MEETING

Mrs. R. E. Wilson led in devotional; Mrs. Warder Wyatt read a most excellent paper on the "Women and Children of Africa." Mrs. Ed Sherman read a touching story about the Cree Indians of the Northwest. Mrs. D. H. Dean led a class in Missions, which was interesting and instructive.

Rev. R. W. Abberley read a letter from Rev. Wolfe, who is a missionary in the Philippine Islands, and who is supported by the Sunday school and church.

Five new names were proposed and the meeting was one of much enthusiasm. Special music was furnished by Miss Bessie Lee.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Warder Wyatt, in North Perkins st.

SERVICES WERE VERY INTERESTING

Rev. W. H. Clark Preached at South Pearl Street Church Last Night

The special series of meetings being held at the South Pearl street church this week and being addressed by the pastors of the local churches, continue to draw interested hearers, who seldom fear the local ministers in their own churches.

On last evening, Rev. W. H. Clark, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, preached an excellent discourse at these services. The sermon was greatly appreciated by all who heard him.

Dr. V. W. Tevis, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, will preach on Friday evening.

SAP TIME IS HERE FARMERS PREPARE

From Now on the "Pure Maple" will be the Real Thing - Activity in Camps

"Say," said the grocer, "there's going to be something doing in a short time, when the tree molasses begin to come in. We are busy now selling the maple accessories to the farmers. What do I mean by accessories? Why pans and buckets and such. No, I don't know anything about brown sugar. If they buy it it's their business."

"What I mean is that under this new pure food law every jug made of maple syrup the farmers bring in will have to be labeled according to its contents. So much maple, so many corn cobs, so much hickory bark and a jagger of brown sugar, or if it is pure stuff, they will have the right to say so."

"We have the finest maple syrup in the world right here in this county and there is more of the unadulterated product than you would think for. I believe a good many of our farmers can write 'pure maple syrup' on their jugs and tell the truth about it. Still, some of these labels will be interesting."

The warehouse in South Main street, which is being occupied by McGinnis and Thomas, is undergoing repairs and will make an excellent farm implement warehouse.

—Charles Stiers is down from New Castle visiting friends in this city.

GRUBBS CONFESSES STORY OF A MOST COLD BLOODED MURDER

Negro Fiend Tells How he and Victim's Wife Conspired and How They Cruelly Killed Coleman in his Buggy

HORRIBLE DEED BEGGARS DESCRIPTION

With the Soul of a Judas, Wife Threw her Arms About her Husband and Pushed Him Forward That Grubbs Could Strike—Her Confession to the Coroner

Contrary to the general supposition that Mrs. Charles Coleman, the widow of the victim of Monday night's tragedy, who is held in jail charged with murder in the first degree, did not make a confession to the local authorities yesterday, but her paragon and accomplice, John Henry Grubbs did unbosom himself and confess one of the coldest, cruelest and most blood thirsty murders ever committed in this locality, and one that is revolting in detail and almost beggars an accurate chronicle without literally writing it in blood.

It was when the fiend learned that he was trapped and that the tell tale blood covered shoes and overcoat had been found that he weakened and told the story. When confronted with the evidence he seemed to be overwhelmed and with a look of pain and anguish on his face, like a rat caught in a trap, the fellow broke down and displayed at least one trait of a human, that of desiring to lift a mental strain from a perturbed mind by telling the whole truth of the affair.

The story was told at the county jail in the presence of Prosecutor Hack, Deputy Newbold, Sheriff King and City Marshal Price, yesterday afternoon. Miss Lois Dawson, circuit court stenographer took down the statements made.

After spending most of the entire day yesterday, first with one of the prisoners and then with the other, the officials repaired to the county jail, and taking Grubbs from his cell went to the second story of the jail, where the women's department is located, and here it was that the story, which parallels anything in the wild imagination of the great catalogues of fiction, was told in the presence of Mrs. Coleman.

Grubbs admitted killing Coleman, but he declared emphatically that Mrs. Coleman not only had a knowledge of the murder, but also assisted in dispatching her husband. He said that two other attempts had been made to murder Coleman. One time, after they had talked the matter over, Mrs. Coleman put some rough-on-rats in a cup of saffron tea and served it to her husband at the evening meal, but after taking one sup of it he pushed it aside saying it did not taste exactly right, although his suspicions were not aroused in fact little did the man ever dream that there was a plot on foot to remove him. A second attempt was also thwarted, but in what manner was not thoroughly explained. It was during the recent rainy weather that Mrs. Coleman approached Grubbs saying it would be an ideal time to kill her husband as very few people would be around. On some pretense they were to get him to leave the house but in some inexplicable manner the scheme could not be put into execution.

They made up their minds to remove Coleman at any cost and no other way was ever considered but murder. This desire was born of lust, for Grubbs declared they were desperately in love with each other and meant to have each other, if it cost the eternal damnation of both their bodies and souls.

According to Grubbs' confession Coleman came to this city early Monday morning and returned once during the day, but immediately went back to this city. It was not until eight o'clock on the fatal night that he returned home to retire. While he was away during the day the murder was carefully planned as if the taking of a life meant no more to them than the killing and dressing of a chicken.

Grubbs feigned illness and Coleman was induced to arise and go for a doctor. The husband has always suspected that his wife and Grubbs were and had been intimate with each other, although he never had any direct proof or really any grounds to base this suspicion other than they were sweethearts in childhood, and for that reason he never left the house after night without having his wife accompany him. So it was that he insisted Monday night that she must go with him and this she agreed to do. Together they dressed and repaired to the barn lot where the pony was hitched to a buggy and they started off. In the meantime Grubbs had quietly sneaked out of the house and was near the gate at the barn lot when they drove out. He waited until they had passed out and then he sprung upon the rear axle and there he remained riding until he received the signal from Mrs. Coleman, agreed upon before they left. She had placed the hatchet, used in the attack, in the rear of the buggy that Grubbs might get it and strike at the proper time. Then near the spot where the body was found the following morning, Mrs. Coleman of a sudden, threw both arms about her husband, in the spirit of a demoniac Judas, and pushed his body forward in the buggy so that his head extended out beyond the curtain on the side, then, giving a sharp cry, the signal agreed upon, Grubbs was apprised of the helpless man's position, and he says he swung the hatchet with all the force possible striking Coleman on the side of the head. The body then either fell out or was pushed out by the woman, and both Grubbs and Mrs. Coleman stepped out into the road and drove the pony up so that they could reach the body as it laid in the road. Grubbs says Mrs. Coleman then asked him, as he bent over the prostrate form whether life was extinct and he replied that he did not know for sure. That there would be no doubt of the fellow living, he said, he then took the hatchet again and struck Coleman over the head a number of times. Together they dragged the body to the side of the road and it was then, according to Grubbs, that the woman took a large knife from his coat pocket and cut her own husband's throat, almost severing the head from the body.

After the crime was committed he says they returned to the Coleman home and carefully rehearsed the story they were to tell of the affair. Mrs. Coleman, he says, took all her clothing off, even her underclothing, and while nude, stood before a large stove and watched them burn to ashes. He said that she destroyed some of his clothing and was to dispose of all of it if she could not clean the blood off.

Grubbs told the story without flinching and in a straightforward manner while the woman, whom he charged with being an accomplice sat looking him in the eye, occasionally shaking her head as if to deny some of the assertions he was making.

Grubbs said that he had been intimate with the Coleman woman for many months. He declared he loved her madly and was willing to do anything and suffer any consequence that he might have her. Nearly every morning, he said, when the husband would leave the house going to the barn to feed, he said Mrs. Coleman would arise and come into his bedroom and remain there until they would hear the husband returning. He said he loved the woman so passionately that he was willing to be hung now and would die willingly if she was to die with him. In all probability this wish will be gratified.

It was largely due to the systematic and endless search led by City Marshal Price, who has hardly closed his eyes in sleep since the deed was first reported and the investigation presided over by Prosecutor Hack that the mystery was solved and the guilty parties brought to justice.

The official did not deem it good policy to let the public in on the confession last night, for they entertained a fear that mob violence might result, on account of the cold blooded manner in which the poor unfortunate was killed.

About eight o'clock, hardly a colored man was to be seen on the streets, and as this was out of the ordinary, the officials, fearing a lynching bee was brewing, they decided to spirit the negro out of the jail and out of the city. The colored population of this city was incensed as they never were before in this city, and on many occasions Tuesday and Wednesday threatening speeches and declarations were heard. It cost but little effort to remove all dangers of lynching, and Sheriff King and Marshal Price were delegated to take Grubbs away. About nine-thirty o'clock the officers went to the jail and took the prisoner out the back entrance and through the alleys to the C. H. & D. depot, where they left for Indianapolis at 9:45. Grubbs was safely lodged in the Marion county jail in "Murderer's Row."

Mrs. Coleman spent a restless night in the jail and today was the picture of despair. She vigorously denied the Grubbs story saying it was a lie and that he was telling it row that he might bring her into it and make her suffer with him.

To Coroner Will S. Coleman she made a statement today, giving her version of the crime. She says to begin with that never did she enter into a conspiracy to kill her husband, although she admitted that there was a time when she loved Grubbs, and that she had been intimate with him all along. She admitted going to Connersville with him last fall and that on several occasions they had talked of running off together, but never did she agree to have a hand in removing her husband or did she ever entertain a thought or have an inkling that Grubbs had such designs.

Mrs. Coleman declared to the coroner that she really believed Grubbs was ill on Monday night when he began to complain. She says her husband arose and made ready to go after the doctor, but Grubbs insisted on going saying it would be cheaper if the doctor did not have to make the drive. She says the two men left the house together and that murder or any thing of that nature was far removed from her thoughts. The next she saw of either one was when Grubbs returned covered with blood. With fiendish glee he then told her of how he had killed her husband and how they would soon be free to marry each other. It was all so repulsive to her and such a shock she scarcely knew what to do or say. When she finally declared that all was over between them and that she meant to tell the world of the crime, she says that he cowed her and threatened to kill her right then if she did not change her mind. He further told her he would kill her if she ever divulged one word of the truth and did not tell the story the concocted. She knew him to be a desperate man and thought he would carry out his threats, so she decided to do as he said, it seeming to her, she said, to be the best thing to do under the circumstances. Mrs. Coleman says that the man's name was not John Henry Grubbs, but Leslie Bundrant and that he was obliged to change his name on account of getting into trouble in Kentucky.

Those who have heard both stories are prone to believe the version told by Grubbs as he was the first to make a statement, unless something was divulged before the grand jury, and it is a most likely and consistent story throughout. Immediately after the murder was reported and the officers hurried to the scene, one of the first things noted by City Marshal Price was that there were marks on the rear axle, made by someone standing on it. It was his conclusion that Coleman had been killed by a party who climbed on as the colored farmer drove along and from the amount of blood on the curtain on the left side of the buggy, the opinion entertained was that the first blow was struck through the rear curtain. The fact that there were unmistakable footprints on the rear axle bears out the Grubbs story and will reflect largely against the woman.

Many of the citizens are demanding that the pair be given a speedy trial and little sympathy is expressed for either principals.

Coleman's remains were shipped to Kentucky today for burial.

SICKENING HORROR

Fire In Suburban School at Cleveland Claims Near Two Hundred Victims.

AWFUL FATE OF CHILDREN

Their Egress From Burning Building Cut Off by Their Own Panic Tots Perish Miserably.

Anguish Stricken Parents Compelled to Stand Helplessly by and Witness Holocaust.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—There are 165 bodies in the morgue, of which 108 have been identified and 57 are still unknown. It is possible that other bodies may be found in the ruins, as at least thirteen children are still missing and have not been heard from since the fire.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—Death in one of its most terrible forms claimed between 160 and 175 school children of the North Collinwood school, in the village of Collinwood, an eastern suburb, when the school building, catching fire from a defective furnace in the basement, was gutted in the space of half an hour.

The building being inadequately protected by fire escapes, the children were unable to make their way to the lower floors in time to escape the flames as they shot up from the basement and cut off egress. Starting in the basement from the overheated furnace, the fire gained tremendous headway before its presence was noted. The fire drill was inaugurated at once, and those in the rooms on the lower floors quickly moved out of the building; but when the panic-stricken little ones in the upper rooms attempted to make their way to the stairway, the jam of uncontrolled and fear-stricken children grew until but few were able to extricate themselves, and they perished almost within reach of safety.

Various and unconfirmed statements are made as to the cause of the fire, and also that the doors of the building had been locked at the front entrance, while but one door of the rear entry was unfastened. The janitor, Fritz Herter, himself bereaved of three children, says the doors were open, according to custom. At any rate the congestion of fleeing children in the hallway below effectually barred the way, and the little ones went to their death, totally unable to evade the flames.

Within three hours after the start of the fire, it had burned itself out, and the work of recovering the bodies proceeded. The village fire department had only two engines, and neither, upon arrival after the alarm was given, was at all effective in stemming the flames.

The school was a two-story and attic brick building, constructed about six years ago. It was over-crowded with pupils and it was found necessary to utilize the attic for those of the ages between six and eight. Nearly all the children were killed in the mass at the first floor door, which finally was opened by men from the Lake Shore railway shops, who hurried to the scene. A wall of flame had formed across it, and most of the children already were dead by the time the doors were swung open. Approximately 300 children attended the school, which had nine rooms.

Janitor Herter could remember little of what happened after the fire started. "I was sweeping in the basement," he said, "when I looked up and saw a wisp of smoke curling from beneath the front stairway. I ran to the fire alarm and pulled the gong that sounded throughout the building. Then I ran first to the front and then to the rear doors. I cannot remember what happened next, except that I saw the flames shooting all about and the children running down through them, screaming. Some fell at the rear entrance and others stumbled over them. I saw my little Helen among them. I tried to pull her out, but the flames drove men back. I had to leave my little child to die." Herter was badly burned about the head.

Miss Catherine Weiler, one of the nine teachers in the school, lost her life in a vain effort to marshal the pupils of her class and lead them to safety. She died in the crush at the rear door. Her room was on the second floor and when the fire alarm sounded she marched her pupils out into the hall, thinking it was only a fire drill. There the truth dawned upon both teachers and pupils and control was lost. The children in their frenzy plunged into the struggling mass ahead of them. Miss Weiler attempted to stem the rush, but went down under it and her body was found an hour later piled high with those of her pupils. Miss Weiler formerly lived in Detroit and was educated in Toledo. Miss Fisk, another teacher, was taken out alive, but she cannot live.

Burning through the cross-supports of the first floor, the flames passed upward until all three floors crashed into a smoldering pile in the basement. After the fire had practically burned itself out the work of rescuing the bodies was begun by firemen and railroad employees from the Lake Shore shops. The railroad company turned over one of its buildings near by to be used as a temporary morgue, and thither the charred and broken little bodies were removed as fast as they could be dug from the ruins. Within five hours practically all had been recovered. They were placed in rows in the Lake Shore shop. Identifications were made only by means of clothing or trinkets. The fire had swept away nearly all resemblance to human features in the majority of instances. Distracted parents soon began to gather and the work of identification of the blackened and mangled bodies began.

The gruesome task of taking out the blackened torsos and bits of human remains was one of horror. A line of rescuers was formed, backed by half a dozen ambulances. As the bodies were untangled from the debris they were passed along to the stretchers and thence loaded in the ambulances. Mercifully covered with blankets, the pitiful sights were veiled from the crowd of curious that stretched about the entrance to the structure. As fast as a load was obtained it was driven away to the improvised morgue, to be succeeded by another within a short time.

The sights of the human charnel-house caused the men delving into the mass of burned flesh to hesitate, but the work had to be done and done quickly, so their feelings had to be smothered for the time being as they tenderly handled all that was mortal of the little tots.

At the temporary morgue in the Lake Shore shop the scenes became four-fold in the intensity of human suffering as fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters passed up and down the lines formed of 160 corpses. To facilitate identification the bodies were numbered as they were received at the morgue. The first identification was made by the mother of Nels and Tommy Thompson, aged six and nine years respectively. The heads and arms had been burned from both bodies, but the mother recognized the shoes on their feet. And so the disheartening work went on, accentuated now and then by a piercing shriek or plaintive moan as a loved one was recognized by clothing or token, such as ring or necklace.

How Many Indiana Schools Are Traps Such as That at Collinwood?

THE EXITS OPENED INWARD

In Addition to This Criminal Fault, the Rear Door of Fated Building Had Been Locked.

The Blood of Stain Innocents Cries Out For Better Supervision of Schools.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—Miss Ethel Rose, a teacher on the first floor of the Collinwood school building, whose pupils were the youngest in the school, managed to get all but three of her charges out of the building in safety when the flames swept the building. Two of the smaller she carried in her arms. Miss Anna Moran, the principal of the school, and two of the teachers, Miss Gollmar and Miss Rowley, escaped by one of the windows in the rear. They remained with the panic-stricken children until they could do no more for them, and then sought their own safety.

Miss Laura Bodey, the only teacher on the third floor, formed her pupils in line and marched them down to the second floor where, finding the flames rushing up the stairway, she turned them around and hurried them back again to the third floor. She here broke a window with a chair and, getting onto the platform of the fire-escape, lifted out her pupils one by one and sent them down. Four or five children who broke from the line she had formed and ran down the stairway, were killed.

One of the heroines of the catastrophe was little Marie Wilman of 5227 Lake street. She ran through the smoke-filled halls and grasped her little brother, whom she managed to drag from the room and take out through a window, both of them being nearly strangled with smoke.

Miss Gollmar said: "It was awful. I can see the wee things in my room holding out their tiny arms and crying to me to help them. Their voices are ringing in my ears yet, and I shall never forget them. When the alarm rang I started the pupils to marching from the building. When we started down the front stairs we were met by a solid wall of flame and clouds of dense smoke. We retreated, and when we turned the children became panic-stricken and I could not do anything with them. They became jammed in the narrow stairway, and I knew that the only thing for me to do was to get around to the rear door if possible and help those who were near the entrance. When I got there after climbing out of a window I found the children so crowded in the narrow passageway that I could not pull even one of them out. Those behind pushed forward, and as I stood there the little ones piled up on one another. Those who could, stretched out their arms to me and cried for me to help them. I tried with all my might to pull them out and stayed there until the flames drove me away."

Another teacher, Miss Pearl Lynn, narrowly escaped death. She was carried toward the rear entrance by the rush of the panic-stricken pupils and fell at the bottom of the stairs with numbers of the children on top of her. She lay there unable to rise because of the weight of the bodies upon her. She was dragged from the mass of dead children just in time to save her own life.

Among those who sought vainly through the morgue for their children was Mrs. John Phillips of Polar street, whose fifteen-year-old daughter was among the dead. Her attention was called to the fire by her four-year-old son, who called her to come to the window and "see the children playing on the fire-escape." Mrs. Phillips ran to the schoolhouse and found her daughter among those penned in around the front door. She took hold of her hands, but could not pull her out.

"I reached in and stroked her hair," said Mrs. Phillips, "trying to keep the fire from burning her hair. I stayed there and pulled at her and tried to keep the fire away from her till a heavy piece of glass fell on me, cutting my hand nearly off. Then I fell back and my girl died before my face."

One of the scenes of supreme horror that attended the fire occurred at the rear door of the building before the firemen arrived. This door, like the one in front, opened inward, and it was locked. The children were piled up high against it and when it finally was broken down by their weight and because of the fire that had partly burned and weakened it, the women who had gathered on the outside saw before them a mass of white faces and struggling bodies. The flames swept over the aisle while the women stood helpless, unable to lift a hand to aid the children. Many of the women were unable to withstand the sight and dropped fainting to the ground.

The fire department was late in reaching the building and when it came the apparatus was inadequate and the men were volunteers, there being no paid fire department in the suburb. The water pressure was not sufficiently strong to send a stream to the second-story windows. Moreover, the firemen had no ladder that would reach to the third floor. The volunteers did what they could, but within a few moments after their arrival the task was one for ambulance alone.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS

Many Things Discussed Under License of General Debate.

Washington, March 5.—The post-office appropriation bill technically was under consideration in the house, but the discussion under license of general debate took a wide range. Speculation in cotton, finance, the tariff and a number of miscellaneous matters in turn occupied the whole time of the session. Mr. Sims of Tennessee spoke in favor of the Burleson bill to abolish dealings in cotton futures; Messrs. Chaney of Indiana and Lindberg, Minnesota, talked on the finance question; Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska pleaded for the placing on the free list of wood pulp and print paper, and several others secured the floor for brief periods. General debate on the post-office bill will conclude today at 3 o'clock, when it will be read for amendment.

Currency legislation and the bill to increase the pay of the army were the subjects of consideration in the senate.

The agricultural appropriation bill, agreed upon by the house committee on agriculture, was reported to the house today. The bill carries a total of $11,431,416, which is a reduction of $1,420,005 from the departmental estimates and an excess of $1,984,056 over the amount appropriated for the current fiscal year.

RAPID PROGRESS

Work of Construction on Big Canal Proceeding Apace.

Washington, March 5.—Up to March 1, 28,414,934 cubic yards of excavation had been taken from the Panama canal route. This is just one-fifth of the entire amount that was estimated on May 1, 1904, that would be required to be excavated to complete the waterway.

Should the work proceed at the present rate, it is estimated the remaining excavation would be completed in three years. However, it is understood that the work of excavation will not be pushed to completion, but that meanwhile construction of the locks will proceed, the intention of the commission being to finish all parts of the canal construction at about the same time.

Ohio Delegates for Taft.

Columbus, O., March 5.—Unanimity for William H. Taft as Ohio's candidate for the nomination for president was the feature of the Republican state convention, which selected four delegates-at-large to the national convention and instructed them to "vote for Mr. Taft until he is nominated." Mention of President Roosevelt's name, as was that of Mr. Taft, was received with vociferous applause. The convention, besides naming four delegates and alternates-at-large and two electors-at-large, nominated a full state ticket, headed by Governor Andrew Harris. Attorney General Wade H. Ellis presided over the convention as permanent chairman.

Royal Visitor Expected.

London, March 5.—It is understood that the Prince of Wales, probably accompanied by the Princess of Wales, will go to Canada this summer in a warship, escorted by a small squadron, to represent the king at the celebration of the tercentenary of Champlain's founding of Quebec. It is expected that the prince, after his visit to Quebec, will visit other Canadian cities.

British Mine Disaster.

Bellingham, England, March 5.—A fire broke out last evening in the Hamslead colliery near here. Sixteen miners are entombed and rescuing parties have not been able to reach them. It is thought they have perished.

Gifford Sells His Railroad.

Kankakee, Ill., March 5.—Announcement is made that the sale has been formally completed of the Chicago & Wabash Valley railroad to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad, for $475,000, by Benjamin J. Gifford, sole owner and builder. The transferred road is forty miles long and extends from Zadoc, Ind., to Dinwiddie, Ind., fifteen miles from Gary. The road runs through thousands of acres of land owned by Gifford, who paid for the road as he built it.

Pays Penalty for Trying to Rob.

Petersburg, Ind., March 5.—Elisha Craig of this city, found guilty of assaulting and attempting to rob John Hammond, secretary of the Sunshine Building and Loan association, several weeks ago, has been sentenced in the Pike circuit court to prison at Michigan City for from two to fourteen years.

A Verdict for Hartje.

Pittsburg, March 5.—Augustus Hartje, a millionaire; John L. Welshons, a hardware merchant, and friend of Hartje, and Clifford Hooe, the negro coachman, who have been on trial in criminal court charged with conspiracy to blacken the character of Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, were all acquitted.

The best male quartette ever heard in Rushville—Grand Theatre—March 19th

SENATOR PROCTOR DEAD

Vermont's Leader in National Council Passes Away Suddenly.

who was summoned to the city, was at the bedside when the senator passed away. Senator Proctor was seventy-seven years old.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, MARCH 5 1908

The teachers of New York City are practically unanimous in advocating the use of the rod in school, but they differ as to the weapon to be employed and also as to the particular part of the boy's anatomy that is to receive the punishment. Some want to use a piece of rubber hose, others a cane, and still others a rule. As for the receiving point a few favor the legs, but the great majority advocate the hands or fingers, or the "cushion which nature has provided." It would be interesting to hear from the boys on the subject, but their views have evidently not been sought.

It is a notorious fact that the average American has a very poor knowledge of the people of foreign lands. The Italians, Russians, Poles, Hungarians, Syrians, Armenians, Greeks, Macedonians, Bulgarians, Roumanians, Moldavians, Spaniards, Portuguese—all look alike to him, and are generally known to him under the appellation of "Hunyaks." Many nations send their citizens to us, and therefore it is a wise and patriotic work which the Young Men's Christian Association and the Congregational Education Society are doing to send young men and women abroad to study the customs, environment, language and ideals of those who emigrate to America. This work will make it easier to understand the newcomer better and help him sooner to become an American.

A recent report stated that maple molasses would probably sell at $1.50 a gallon this season. Since the enactment of the pure food law farmers are liable to be fined if they label their molasses as pure when "they" are not. It was always supposed and so heralded abroad that heretofore the price of $1.00 a gallon for maple molasses, the principal ingredient of which was brown sugar syrup that costs about 25 cents a gallon, was such a mighty incentive that a great many maple syrup producers could not withstand the temptation to adulterate. Is it possible that since they can not sell twenty-five cents worth of brown sugar syrup at $1.00 per gallon, that they want to raise the price of pure maple molasses to $1.50?

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT T. TUCKER

Indianapolis, March 5.—Superintendent Schumaker of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League has issued a statement showing that during February remonstrances were filed causing the banishment of saloons in Greenfield, Bluffton, Frankfort, Auburn, Valparaiso, Kendallville and in ten county townships. The population of the new "dry" territory is 55,233. Out of 1,016 townships in the state, 891 are now dry. The league is making a vigorous fight and expects to drive the saloons out of several large cities within the next few months. The temperance wave is under greater headway than ever before in Indiana.

Tomas Taggart, Democratic national chairman, is here today for the meeting of the state committee. Chairman Jackson and most of the members of the state organization are said to be favorable to his candidacy for re-election as national committeeman. Samuel M. Ralston of Lebanon, candidate for the nomination for governor, established himself at the Grand hotel last night to await the arrival of the party leaders. He says that several counties have instructed in his behalf and that he has strong hopes of landing the nomination for governor. What was regarded today as an announcement of the candidacy of Congressman J. A. M. Adair of Portland for the nomination for governor, was the publication of a resolution adopted by his own county, endorsing him as a candidate for governor. Adair is an active candidate now, but he is conducting his campaign from Washington. It is expected that today's meeting of the state committee will be brief, inasmuch as nothing but routine business pertaining to the coming state convention will be taken up. The only matter of public interest confronting the committeemen is that of naming a temporary chairman for the convention, who will deliver the keynote. The rest of the meeting will be devoted to planning convention arrangements.

The report of Colonel J. R. Fesler, assistant adjutant general of the Indiana department of the G. A. R., shows that the G. A. R. posts of the state made encouraging gains in membership in 1907. The total gain over 1906 amounted to thirty members. There are 377 posts in the state, with an aggregate membership of 14,045. Reports on financial conditions of the posts during the last six months show that the total receipts of all posts during this time were $75,732.78, and the total disbursements amounted to $10,316.74. The cash balance on hand at the end of the year was $65,416.04. The total value of all property owned by the G. A. R. posts of the state is estimated at $113,230.80. About 600 members of G. A. R. posts died in the state during the last year.

Chairman James P. Goodrich has issued a call for a meeting of the Republican state committee March 10. Arrangements will be completed then for the state convention. An invitation will be issued to Congressman Jesse Overstreet of Indianapolis to deliver the keynote speech of the convention.

A call has been issued for a meeting of Republican business men of Indianapolis at the Board of Trade building next Monday night in behalf of the candidacy of former Attorney General William L. Taylor for the nomination for governor.

All of the candidates for places on the state ticket had headquarters at Frankfort today, where the Republicans of the Ninth district are holding their congressional convention. Chas. B. Landis of Delphi, will be renominated.

SCIENCE OF FOODS.

Eugene Christian's Plan For Prolonging Human Life.

BASED ON SIMPLE PRINCIPLES

Value of Balanced Diet Explained by the Founder of "Food Science"—How to Derive the Most Nourishment From What We Eat.

By FREDERICK R. TOOMBS.

Food science is a subject that is just now attracting a great deal of attention in many sections of the United States. Its founder, Eugene Christian of New York city, the well known lecturer on diet and health culture and author of "Perfect Health" and "Uncooked Foods," has at the same time been widely talked of as a man who is doing work of tremendous value toward clearing up many of the perplexing dietary problems that confront the public.

Food science paves the way for and will undoubtedly lead to a complete revolution in the manner of living of countless numbers of people. According to eminent authorities, it should have appreciable effect in prolonging human life and in a large measure emancipating people from the use of drugs in the attempted correction of ills resulting from digestive troubles.

The principles on which food science is based are so simple that when they are understood it naturally occurs to a person to wonder why it is that at this late period they are first reduced to an actual science and publicly promulgated.

When asked recently how he accomplished his results Mr. Christian said to the writer:

Naturally my work relates exclusively to the stomach and other organs that assist in the process of digestion and assimilation. The disorders of these organs are caused by errors in eating or drinking.

I study each individual case minutely, taking into consideration the age of the person, temperature, environment, occupation, etc., and then ascertain the specific chemical elements his body requires and in what quantities or proportions.

As the body is composed of fifteen specific chemical elements, all of which are well known to the food chemist, we should take each day such combinations and selections of food as will reproduce these chemical elements in their right proportions. For instance, a man doing ordinary work would need two ounces of protoid matter each twenty-four hours. If he should take four ounces habitually he would ultimately have trouble or if he would only take one ounce he would suffer sooner or later.

The body contains the fifteen different elements arranged all the way from one-half of 1 per cent up to 50 per cent of the whole. The best fed man is the one that can come nearer giving the body all of these chemical elements in the right proportions. The man who gets too fat has fed himself upon an unbalanced diet—too much carbohydrates and albuminoids. The man who is too thin is lacking in these elements and is taking too much protoids, nitrogen, etc. In other words both men feed upon an unbalanced diet.

Mr. Christian has spent almost a lifetime studying the effect on the human system of practically all foods. At his laboratory in 7 East Forty-first street, New York city, he has the services of a chemist formerly employed under Dr. Wiley in the United States government's experimental chemistry department in Washington, and some of the discoveries resulting from investigations directed by Mr. Christian have done much to illuminate the mooted question of how to derive the most nourishment from what we eat.

One of the fundamental principles of food science is that "chemical harmony" should result from the foods we eat. "Chemical harmony" in this sense means that the foods, when taken into the system, digest and assimilate harmoniously. There is no conflict between acids and the natural fluids of the digestive organs. No gases or other unnatural poisons result.

So striking have been some of the beneficial results to persons following the tenets of food science that they have dispensed with the services of the family physician to a considerable extent. As a result the physicians in various parts of the United States arose against Mr. Christian and called him a "fakir." The New York County Medical society went further and had him indicted on the charge that he was practicing medicine without a license. Mr. Christian was arrested, tried, and the lower court found him guilty. He appealed to the appellate division of the New York supreme court, and recently the court handed down a unanimous decision reversing the decision of the lower court. The supreme court justices said in part, "As upon the whole case we find that no crime was committed and that the defendant was improperly convicted, the judgment appealed from should be reversed."

In a recent editorial, commenting on the decision in Mr. Christian's favor, Dr. W. R. C. Latson, the editor of Health Culture, spoke in part as follows:

"This decision of course quite exonerates Mr. Christian, who deserves not only the congratulations of all fair minded men, but credit for his plucky fight against the 'powers that be.' Each man has the right to select his own medical adviser as he has the right to select his own grocer or carpenter. Only the patient should not be deceived as to the status of his adviser."

A Municipal Flag.

The city of Easton, Pa., has adopted a municipal flag, said to be a copy of the flag which waved over that town during the Revolutionary war. The flag has thirteen red and white stripes in the upper corner, and the remainder of the flag is blue, with a circle of eight white stars in the center.

The Prospect of Unbroken Peace With Japan.

By ANDREW CARNEGIE.

CONSIDER the reserved and wise action of the two governments of Japan and the United States in the recent excitement one of the MOST CHEERING SIGNS OF OUR AGE. It was just what that of two intimate friends should be between whom unfortunately a SLIGHT DIFFERENCE had arisen. Each loved the other so well that not one word calculated to offend was uttered.

On the contrary, those highest in authority were foremost in setting the example as PEACEMAKERS and beseeching others to do likewise.

THERE ARE SPECIAL REASONS WHY THE PEOPLE OF JAPAN AND AMERICA SHOULD NEVER KILL EACH OTHER LIKE WILD BEASTS ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE. AMERICA WAS THE FIRST WESTERN NATION WHICH ENTERED INTO FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH JAPAN.

The people of Japan may rest assured that as she was the first to enter into peaceful treaties, so she will be the LAST TO DISTURB THE PEACEFUL AND HIGHLY SATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENTS which now so happily exist between the two lands.

The young lady mentioned in the following article from the Shelbyville Republican is well known in Rushville, having many friends here:

"The engagement of Miss Justine, daughter of Mr. J. Walter Elliott, of this city, to Mr. Archibald C. Millikan, of Indianapolis, was made this afternoon at a party which was given at the Elks' hall by Mrs. Charles E. Karmire, Miss Leefer and Miss Catharine Leefer, Miss Elliott being their niece. The party was attended by a large number of society ladies from this and surrounding towns. The wedding will occur during the early part of April.

BIG PROFIT IN RAISING POULTRY

Farmers are Coming to this Realization as the Market is Always Good Local farmers are beginning to realize that there is a great profit in raising chickens and poultry men are expecting a larger number of fowls to be raised this spring than ever before. Many farmers have dispensed with hens as a means of hatching the eggs, and now use incubators. After reaching the age when chickens are able to hunt for themselves, few farmers pay any attention to them. By picking up grain around barns, and grass and worms in the fields the young chickens grow as rapidly as if they were attended to regularly, it is said. Some are much stronger and not as liable to disease, which chickens often have.

The available markets are this city for the small raisers, but the East for the larger. Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Chicago markets do not pay as well as others. However, most of the poultry will be sold to middlemen who make it a business.

WILSON'S RECEIVE SOME FINE BLOOD

Three Good Horses are Added to the Great Patchen Stable to be Raced

Dick Wilson & Son have added several good horses to their racing stable for next season. This week they received Belle O., a trotter with a race record of 2:09½ and Fred O., a 2:14½ trotter. These horses are owned by A. Wilberham, proprietor of the English hotel, in Indianapolis.

Another fast one which the Wilsons secured this week is Rex L., a green pacer, who has a trial of 2:05½, and who is entered in many of the principal stakes. This horse is owned by Fred Cline, secretary of the Gentleman's Driving Club, of Indianapolis.

HOT OPENING OF THE FALMOUTH SKATING RINK

It is rumored that owing to a collision between a skater and the theater, says the Connersville News, wherein the stove created consternation, by losing its balance and doing itself "bodily harm," the recently opened rink in the Odd Fellows' Hall, at Falmouth, was closed again, after the opening night.

The amount of damages demanded by the Oddfellows cooled the ardor of the rink manager and he quit. The skating fever at Falmouth, which reached an acute stage will have to be treated homeopathically until final abatement.

Shelbyville News: Prosecutor Chas. Hack has all he can break off in Rush county, the "home of peace and good will," as one paper often refers to it. They don't usually murder people in counties like that.

The Presbyterian Band of Workers will hold an Easter market and exchange in the Fred Caldwell room on Main street, on Saturday, April 18th.

MILLER'S SUIT AGAINST MILLERS

"Dusty" Miller Rebels Against Being Classed with the Chronic Dead Beats

One of the "noble 650" has raised a protest. Glen Miller objects to having his name on the "Black List" prepared by the merchants of this city, and now he is demanding damages. Today, through his attorneys, Megee & Kiplinger, Miller filed suit for $1000 damages against Ball & Ball, elevator owners.

It is said that they listed Miller as a "bad account" in the "dead beat directory" and "Dusty" says it will take about one thousand plunkers to square matters and wipe the blot from his fair name.

The case is a most unusual one and for that reason will attract attention. Ball & Ball have retained Attorney A. L. Gary.

SOIL SPECIAL WILL BE HERE NEXT MONDAY NOON

At the Main Street Christian church Tuesday night.

Columbus Republican: The Rushville Republican is authority for the statement that Ash Wednesday is Groundhog day. The Republican does not give any special reasons for its conclusion, but asserts that nobody who claims to be up-to-date observes the second day of February as Ground hog day any more. Most people will go ahead observing the old date, the Rushville day to the contrary notwithstanding.

The law which permits the hunting of ducks and other fowl will expire on March 31st, and the local sportsmen are taking time by the forelock by hunting almost daily. Many ducks are said to be on Flatrock creek and the smaller streams of the county and some big killings have been reported within the past few days.

His COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"Eunice," she began earnestly, her eyes on the distant horizon which was just beginning to deepen its evening hues, "do you ever feel, in your nearness to nature here, how really we ourselves are a part of all this wonderful beauty? It seems to me that this environment," she added, without waiting for Eunice to reply, "ought to make us sensitive to beauty in every detail of life."

Kinross grinned behind his newspaper and settled himself to enjoy the conversation. He was finding Georgiana very diverting.

Eunice looked up from her book, her dark eyes dreamy and absent.

"Sensitive to beauty even to the point of feeling out of harmony with our environment if we are not tastefully dressed," Georgiana went on. "And so," she ended gracefully, laying the gown she held across Eunice's lap, "I want to give you this pretty white gown."

Eunice's eyes grew wide with a questioning surprise. "You want to give it to me?" she asked wonderingly. "But why?"

Kinross, from behind his newspaper, found himself listening intently to hear what Eunice would say.

"Because I feel," Georgiana smiled encouragingly, "that even so trifling a thing as our clothes can help us to get into right relations with life."

The girl's puzzled gaze seemed trying to make it out. But before she could reply Ollie leaned forward and, eagerly examining the embroidery and ruffles on the pretty dress lying across Eunice's lap, asked with undisguised covetousness, "Did you wear it for once or just for so?"

"Oh, I wore it for 'nice,'" Georgiana smiled.

"Eunice she never did think at the clothes much like what I do," Ollie added insinuatingly.

"That is perhaps commendable to a certain point," said Georgiana gently. "But one should give just enough attention to outward adornment to let it express something of the inner life. The refinement of our thoughts and feelings or the lack of it is often symbolized by our dress. We should cultivate our natural inclinations for external harmonies—it is not right to be indifferent to them—they are a legitimate part of life."

She had addressed herself to Eunice, and the girl, still looking puzzled, answered uncertainly. "But when the lack of harmony with one's environment is fundamental mere external adjustment can't help things."

Georgiana looked nonplused. Daisy, fumbling the pages of a book she was not reading, dropped her lower lip in astonishment. Dr. Kinross put down his paper from before his face and took his pipe from his mouth. Even Ollie's face expressed surprise.

"We need not ever let our environment rule us," said Georgiana, looking as though she had lost her bearings, but making an effort to recover herself.

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

"And the great English poet Robert Browning," she continued instructively, "called environment 'machinery,' just meant to give thy life its bent." Emerson's whole gospel is man's spiritual mastery of circumstance. I am aware that most of us are slaves to it. But we can rise to a plane where instead of letting it control us we control it. Otherwise we go through life missing the true beauty, the perfect harmony of the universe. I feel sure that you can find that harmony if you will keep your mind open to it. For instance," she said, with a perfunctory playfulness, "begin by putting on this white gown—in which I feel you will give those about you a genuine aesthetic pleasure—and even help to educate them to a fine taste in the small things of life."

"I suppose you mean to do me a kindness," Eunice answered, her eyes downcast, "and so I thank you. But it would humiliate me to be a recipient of charity. I find more of the 'harmony' which you seem to value so highly in clothing myself only in these clothes than in—other people's things, however beautiful they may be."

She gathered up the white gown as she spoke and laid it on Georgiana's lap.

Kinross saw that Georgiana in her chagrin at the girl's failure to appreciate her generous patronage almost lost sight of the astonishing language she had used.

"If that is the way you feel," she answered, "very well. I beg your pardon if I have offended. I did not mean to. The fact is I have misunderstood. I did not know that—She broke off incoherently, unable to express herself in her new and confused impression of the farm girl.

"Stung again!" exclaimed Daisy.

"Please, Daisy!" protested Georgiana.

"But, indeed, Georgie," pleaded Daisy, "I can't blame Eunice for thinking it isn't worth while to wear glad rags out here when no one would see her anyway."

"That isn't the point at all," returned Georgiana, looking distressed.

"Are you givin' it back?" Ollie here demanded of Eunice incredulously.

"Och, what makes you act so dumb?"

"Mebbe," she said, turning to Georgiana,

"It would fit me—if you want it."

"You are too stout and too short for it," Georgiana answered a little distantly. "It isn't that I want to get rid of the gown. I thought merely to encourage Eunice."

"Encourage me?" repeated Eunice, again puzzled.

"But I see that I was mistaken," she said hastily.

She half turned her back with a movement that closed the conversation. Eunice's eyes fell to her book again, and for a time no one spoke, though Ollie's look of disgust at the loss of the proffered gown was louder than words.

Kinross replaced his pipe in his mouth and drew on it vigorously. This girl, Eunice—the sort of language she used, the ideas she expressed—talking about the want of harmony with her environment being "fundamental!"

"For an unschooled Pennsylvania Dutch girl of the backwoods"—but his reflection was checked by a whispered remark from Daisy at his side.

"Imagine that yard of pump water, Ollie, in one of Georgiana's gowns! She looks as though she weighed 250 Fahrenheit!"

"Do you mean avoirdupois?"

"Now, Pete, you needn't be so smart," she retorted resentfully. "What if I do mean avoirdupois? Oh, dear," she sighed, "I never seem to be cocksure of a fact. I almost wish I were clever instead of pretty."

"Now, if you was Georgie," he remarked, "you'd be both; ain't?"

"Peter," Daisy gently reproved him, "I wouldn't be shocked if you called me Daisy. (Sweet name, isn't it?) But to permit yourself the liberty of calling Miss Ellery 'Georgie'—that's the limit! So you think," she added, "that she's both clever and beautiful? And she thinks you, Peter," she confided to him, "have a latent fineness concealed somewhere about you?"

"A whatever?"

Daisy's answer was arrested by Georgiana's rising from the window sill and sitting down beside her on the front door step. Georgiana had evidently quite recovered her not easily disturbed equanimity.

"What are you reading?" she inquired of Daisy in the tone of gentle patronage she always used to her cousin and for which Daisy appeared humbly grateful. "Or, I should say, what is that book you are not reading? One of those that father made you pack?"

"Yes," sighed Daisy, "this one is to equip me for our European tour next summer. I'm on Switzerland now. It's perfectly dear!" she said, with perfunctory enthusiasm. "The author has so many pretty thoughts about the scenery."

Georgiana smiled indulgently. "Do you know, Daisy, what book you and I ought to have brought with us to read in this setting—with this background?" she asked, waving her hand abroad to indicate the farm at large.

"Imagine that yard of pump water in one of Georgiana's gowns!"

"Which?" inquired Daisy respectfully. "Please to break it to me gently, Georgiana."

"Izaak Walton's 'Compleat Angler.' It is remarkable that such an unpretentious work as 'The Compleat Angler' should have lived since the seventeenth century and be so very much alive still."

"Wait! I'd better make a note of that," said Daisy, gathering up her book and pencil.

"It lives," Georgiana went on thoughtfully, "because it so vividly exhales on every page nature's true message. Why, if anything could make me want to go a-fishing, Izaak Walton's picture of its delights would tempt me. And the famous passage about the worm—in which he recommends anglers to be merciful to it—"

"The worm?" It was Eunice's soft voice that spoke impulsively. "It was not to the worm, but to the frog that Izaak Walton recommended anglers to be merciful, wasn't it? Use him as though you loved him; that is, harm him as little as you may possibly that he may live the longer," she quoted.

Kinross leaned forward in his chair, his elbow on his knee, his chin on his hand. The two young ladies stared at the girl as though unable to credit the evidence of their ears.

"You have read 'The Compleat Angler'?" Georgiana's astonished tones inquired.

"Many times," the girl answered, then suddenly colored and shrank back a little. "I—have seen it—yes."

"You have seen it to some purpose since you are able to quote it so accurately?"

Eunice looked down at the Bible on her knee and did not answer.

"But, Eunice, where did you get the book?" asked Georgiana.

"I—came by it—once."

"And you read it many times?" she persisted.

Eunice glanced up with a faint smile. "Not so much for its didactic instructions about fishing, but for the anecdotes scattered through it, the quotations and songs and poems."

"You have the book in the house?" asked Georgiana.

The girl looked uncomfortable. "I have not read it for more than a year," she said with evident evasion.

"If you are fond of reading—and of such reading—we shall be glad to let you have some of our books," said Georgiana in a tone of encouragement to struggling rural ambition.

"Offer her 'Some Facts About the Great Back Bone Family,'" advised Daisy earnestly. "It's so fearfully uninteresting that I'm sure it must be very instructive and beneficial."

"Thank you," Eunice replied. "But," she added, with an uneasy glance at Ollie, "I never have time to read except on Sunday, and Mr. Morningstar would not allow me to read anything but the Bible then."

"But I am so glad to find," said Georgiana graciously, "that when you do have an opportunity to read good literature you take advantage of it and that you read so appreciatively."

"I am glad to be a source of such happiness to you," said Eunice, speaking with a faint unconscious touch of irony that suddenly brought the color to Georgiana's cheeks. Eunice herself looked as though she scarcely understood the vague discomfort which possessed her under the almost affectionate patronage of Miss Ellery.

The sound of a step on the porch—which evidently announced the expected arrival of Ollie's "regular company"—led Eunice to quickly close her Bible and rise to go away.

But she was stopped on the threshold.

PASTOR FOR SUNDAY GAMES.

No Harm In Sabbath Amusements Minus Profit, Says Boston Divine.

"If my choir boys wanted to play a game of baseball on Sunday after coming from church I would give them and the game my blessing," declared the Rev. William H. Van Alen, rector of the Church of the Advent in Boston, the other day at a hearing before the legislative committee on legal affairs on proposed changes in the Sunday laws. The clergyman's statement was a bombshell to the arguments of the score of theater proprietors and others who were asking the committee for more lenient laws.

"There isn't a particle of harm in a baseball game or any other amusement," continued Mr. Van Alen, "if you take away the money profit and if the community is not disturbed in its observance of the Sabbath. A man has a perfect right, in my mind, to amuse himself as he chooses under his own roof or on his own grounds. The law should not prohibit him from playing a game of golf or baseball provided he does not disturb his neighbors."

ENGAGEMENT BRACELETS.

Princess Marie Bonaparte Started the Idea—Worn on Upper Arm.

The newest Parisian fad is the betrothal bracelet. It is not worn on the wrist, but on the upper arm, the left arm, as nearest the heart.

The fashion is said to have been introduced by Princess Marie Bonaparte, who received from Prince George of Greece instead of the traditional ring a double band of gold made to fit about her arm close up to the shoulder.

The two broad rings of which the ornament consists were chased with an antique design and studded with diamonds and sapphires and had a clasp of diamonds.

The engagement bracelet is made in many forms, however, sometimes with bangles of gems, and sometimes with little chains of pearls looped from it. Often it is perfectly plain save for a single fine diamond or a small star of brilliants.

The bracelet must not take any fanciful form, such as serpentine, rope or openwork effects. Its significance is in the double band, which is supposed to typify the union of the couple.

Turtle as Watchdog.

There is a new use for turtles, though as yet it has not come into common use. A passenger recently arriving at New York from Savanilla, Colombia, was accompanied by a turtle, which appeared to be endowed with more human intelligence than the officers of the ship or officials at the immigration bureau on Ellis island, where the man remained until he was shipped back to Colombia, gave the animal credit for the turtle appeared to hear and understand everything his master said and at night slept on a mat outside the stateroom door, acting as watchdog. Those who know turtles say that, while the shellfish may not be very active, it has a grip which equals that of a full blooded bulldog.

HISTORIC GIFT FOR PROVIDENCE.

Home of First Commander of the American Navy.

FOR USE AS PUBLIC MUSEUM.

Great-great-grandson of Admiral Essex Hopkins To Give Ancient Landmark as Memorial to Mother—Fine Colonial Mansion Filled With Relics.

For the purpose of fulfilling his mother's last and greatest wish Marshall Hopkins Gould, son of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Angell West Gould of 872 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and great-great-grandson of Admiral Essex Hopkins, the first commander of the American navy, is making preparations to turn over to the city of Providence, R. I., the famous historic Hopkins mansion, 165 years old, as a monument to the memory of Mrs. Gould.

The ancient landmark, built by the admiral as a permanent home in 1755, is undergoing a rehabilitation in the shape of a new dress of paint, both within and without, and the restoration of its rooms to their original appearance so far as possible.

When that task has been completed and a quantity of antique furniture, most of it handed down directly from the family of the admiral, which is today in storage at Cambridge, shall have been installed in the mansion it will be ready to be placed at the disposal of the city for park purposes.

To that end Mrs. Gould had toiled unremittingly, often spending entire weeks in the old homestead. On Dec. 16 while actively engaged in work at the house which would aid in fitting it up ready for occupancy by the city she was stricken with apoplexy and died before nightfall. Her son had been hastily summoned from Cambridge and was by her side.

Almost her last act in connection with her intention to give the house and the land upon which it stands to the city was to hand to Alderman John C. Dunn of the Third ward a formal agreement which she had caused to be drawn up and signed by herself in the presence of her son, who was fully in sympathy with his mother's purposes. That agreement is now in the possession of the aldermen.

That the city will purchase the adjoining two and one-half acres of land on the Church lot is a certainty. Alderman Dunn and William K. Reynolds have taken an active interest in the plans of Mrs. Gould and will see the project through. The Hopkins homestead and the land upon which it stands, comprising two and one-half acres, are valued at approximately $20,000. The adjoining property can be bought for $10,000.

When the furnishing of the house has been completed to Mr. Gould's satisfaction in accordance with his mother's expressed desires the intrinsic worth of the property will be greatly enhanced, while as a historical relic its value can hardly be measured.

The house is a large structure of colonial design and commodious rooms. It has withstood the wear and tear of occupants and the effects of weather and climate wonderfully, most of its heavy timbers being as sound to the heart as the day the admiral saw them raised to form the framework of his homestead. Standing on an eminence overlooking the city, with its northern portion in the immediate foreground, it occupies one of the picturesque spots of Providence.

In her effort to restore the old colonial aspect to the place Mrs. Gould has transformed the various rooms of the stanch old homestead into veritable museums of antiquity and Hopkins family relics. So successful has been her quest for furniture and bric-a-brac of a character to restore the ancient appearance of the house's interior that a visit to the place imparts the sensation of stepping a century backward and becoming part and parcel of the famous admiral's time.

It needs but a slight stretch of the imagination to bring America's first naval commander to life and place him in the mammoth chair beside the fireplace or at a table littered with maps, charts and designs of ships in his chamber on the second floor, there to work out problems of defense and offense with his miniature fleet.

So completely has been preserved the furniture of the Revolutionary period and the subdued, time worn colorings of the interior decorations maintained that the illusion is hardly dispelled by the rumble of the twentieth century trolley along the highway within a few rods of the door or the shriek of the locomotive's whistle as the Bay State limited express enters the railroad yard at the foot of Charles street.

The kitchen of the dwelling has been restored to what it was in the admiral's time. The old fireplace, the heart of the mansion, has been replaced probably exactly as it was 100 years ago, even to the rough laying of the bricks in the fireplace itself and the generous hearthstones, which extend over nearly a third of the floor space of the room.

While not as large as some in houses of an earlier period, the fireplace is ample and capable of taking in a good sized log. The fittings with which it was equipped are identical with the period of the house's construction and are relics of the Hopkins family possessions. The crane, kettles and andirons are of the type made for use and not for show.

To add still further to the original appearance of the kitchen, its furniture includes a spinning wheel, a linen wheel and a bobbin winder of the old time textile layout. The walls are adorned with a cup railing, from which hang specimens of old china, while stuffed birds and other bric-a-brac held in high esteem a century ago are in evidence about the room.

The kitchen's crowning glory among its articles of furniture, however, is the bear's claw mahogany table with its rich polished surface and solid, substantial construction. It is no task at all to believe that generations of the Hopkins family sat around this board and fell to lustily after the head of the household had said that long and somewhat wearisome grace offered in colonial days.

The donor of this substantial historical monument to the city was born in Providence, the daughter of George and Sophia Hawes West. In early life she moved to Taunton with her parents, where she lived until she was twenty. At that age she married Frederick Gould of Boston, who has had a notable career as a member of the Harvard faculty.

Mrs. Gould inherited the Hopkins mansion from her great-aunt, Elizabeth Angell, after whom she was named. Mrs. Gould was active in the Rhode Island chapter of the Colonial Dames, the Society of the Descendants of the Mayflower and the Daughters of the American Revolution. It was her desire that she be buried near the Hopkins Park monument, where her mother and sister lie.

GLACIA CALLA'S FINE HOME.

Rug For Noted Beauty From Persia's Shah and Furniture From Egypt.

In gathering evidence to be used in the case against Paul Emile Roy of France for the murder of George A. Carkins, his brother-in-law, Sheriff Collis of Portsmouth, N. H., recently went through the house of Mrs. Roy, better known as Glacia Calla, the noted beauty and singer. It is one of the most beautiful in Portsmouth and is said to have been originally purchased for Miss Calla by J. G. Hathaway of Boston.

Last summer it was remodeled at a cost of $8,000. Its interior furnishings are said to have cost $50,000. Every thing bears a French name. The grand square piano was made in France and it is said, cost $5,000.

Among the wall ornaments is a large oil painting of Miss Calla by Paul Jobert. There are also pictures of Mmes. Eames, Melba and Calve, Miss Ellen Beach Yaw and other singers of note. There is a large photograph of the shah of Persia, one of Colonel Henry Mapleson and one of Walter I. Badger, a lawyer of Cambridge, Mass., who is said to have helped the girl to get her musical education.

There is a large polar bear rug, the gift of the shah of Persia. It is about sixteen feet long and about ten feet wide. The furniture of the dining room is of rare beauty and is said to have come from Egypt. Dark red silk tapestry in panels adorns the walls of this room. Miss Calla showed the reporter a large diamond ring given to her by the shah of Persia.

LONG CRIBBAGE CONTEST.

Iowa Men Have Played Seven Years In a Million Point Game.

A cribbage game for a million points, which has already extended over a period of seven years, is being played in Des Moines by Colonel John C. Loper and Milo Ward. The score up to a recent date was 460,234 to 455,234. The players estimate that they will live to finish the exciting contest in 1915.

Both men are prominent in Des Moines, Mr. Loper being sheriff of Polk county and Milo Ward secretary of the Commercial Exchange. The men play once a week from half past 7 o'clock to 11 o'clock in the evening. These men have played for over 376 consecutive weeks and religiously keep their weekly engagement. The average number of points made each night for the last seven years is 2,150.

The players have worn out a number of cribbage boards and about 250 packs of cards.

Portugal's Valuable Crown.

When King Manuel II. of Portugal is crowned the ceremony will include his assumption of the most valuable crown in Europe. Taken at a jeweler's estimate, the Portuguese crown is recorded as being worth $8,000,000. In shape and size it is almost a facsimile of the Spanish and the old Polish crowns, though in the value of its jewels its nearest rival is the czar's diadem, which is supposed to have cost $6,500,000. The crown placed upon the English king's head is valued at a mere $1,800,000.

ACTION OF STATE

New Brief Filed In the French Lick Valley Cases.

SEEK TO ANNUL CHARTERS

Big Hotel Companies at French Lick and West Baden Confronted by New Movement.

Attorney General's Latest Brief Takes Exception to Claim of Defendant Companies.

Indianapolis, March 5.—Attorney General Bingham has filed a new brief in the appellate court in the action resulting from the raiding of the gambling casinos at French Lick and West Baden two years ago. The state is seeking to annul the charter of the two big hotel companies on the ground that they violated their rights by permitting and encouraging gambling on their premises. The lower court ruled in favor of the defendant companies, but the appellate court reversed its decision. The defendant companies then asked for a rehearing of the case in the lower court. The attorneys for the defendants assert that if it is shown that the properties were successfully operated for the purpose for which they were incorporated, the state would not be entitled to revoke their charter because they permitted gambling on their premises. Exception is taken to this claim by Attorney General Bingham.

IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

Court Takes Over Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Company.

Laporte, Ind., March 5.—Judge C. Richter in the circuit court, on application of stockholders representing 2,000 shares of the stock of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line company, last evening appointed George F. Mull of Indianapolis receiver for the company for the Co-Operative Construction company and for the Goshen, South Bend & Chicago Railway company. The Western Securities company, the Gary & Interurban company and the Hancock company also are made defendants. The receiver immediately filed a $50,000 bond.

The Air Line company is capitalized at $5,000,000. Alexander C. Miller of Aurora, Ill., is the president of the concern. According to an announcement of the company, it is proposed to shorten the distance between Chicago and New York to 750 miles and to cut down the running time between these points to ten hours. The line has been graded between Chicago and Laporte, and the rails have been laid over several miles of the distance. The company was financed through an agency organized for the purpose, which has branches in practically every large city in the country.

The complaint charges President Miller and others with various unlawful acts, including misuse of the mails, participation in secret rebates and sale of stock, with giving enormous salaries, etc. Assets of the company are said to be less than half a million dollars.

This Burglar a Wit.

Logansport, Ind., March 5.—The burglars who plundered several homes and the postoffice at Young America are not only experts, but possessed of humor. William Hubler, merchant, who lost $126.38 in the raid, has received a receipt for the money, signed "R. U. Next." A brief note accompanied the receipt reading, "This receipt may help you in auditing your books." The postmark on the letter was so badly blurred that it was impossible to tell where it was mailed. However, there are certain features indicating that Fort Wayne was the sending point.

WAR ON THE MISTLETOE.

Crusade Organized in Texas to Eradicate Pest That Poisons Trees.

The alarming destruction of Texas trees through the agency of the poisonous mistletoe has induced M. B. Davis, secretary of the Texas Audubon society, to sound a warning to those interested in trees to destroy the mistletoe before it in turn denudes the state of its forests.

"Every municipality in Texas is afflicted with the pest, and it has been stated by an authority that the life of a tree when thoroughly inoculated with mistletoe poison will terminate in about seven years," said Mr. Davis to the Waco correspondent of the Fort Worth Record. "It is carried from one tree to another by certain birds feeding on the berries, and wherever it finds lodgment on trees susceptible to its deadly parasitic growth its blight proves fatal in time unless heroic treatment is applied. At this season, while the evergreen parasite is clearly discernible upon the bare boughs, the work should be done."

"The Texas mistletoe (Phoradendron flavescens) differs materially from its kindred parasite evergreen of Europe (Viscum album), held in veneration by the Druids, which is kept in check in the old world, but cultivated to some extent for winter decoration. The variety in the cotton states is far more pernicious and must be wholly exterminated or the trees will all perish from its baleful blight. Any one may observe from car windows that entire forests are being killed by mistletoe."

"It is a beautiful but horrible parasite and can be destroyed finally only by cutting off the entire bough on which its growth appears. The hackberry, which is popular in the cities as a shade tree, is one of the favorites of this poisonous parasite, and in nearly every city in this state (Texas) where hackberry trees have been planted about 25 per cent of them have already died from mistletoe poison."

Game Bird Experiment.

Kansas is trying to improve and enlarge its stock of game birds and has begun the work with ten pairs of Hungarian partridges, which were recently set loose on a ranch near Cottonwood Falls. The birds resemble the familiar quail of Kansas, but they are larger, being about two-thirds the size of prairie chickens. It is believed they can be successfully propagated in Kansas.

State Prison Crowded.

Michigan City, Ind., March 5.—Twenty convicts were transferred from the Jeffersonville reformatory to Michigan City today. These are men who have been found over the reformatory age of thirty years, incorrigibles and men who have served more than one term. The prisoners were transported in a special car, under guard of reformatory officials. The additional men will push the prison count up to 1,093, and the institution is now crowded to the limit for cell room.

Kansas Republicans in state convention elected four delegates at-large to the Chicago convention instructed to vote for the nomination of Secretary W. H. Taft for president.

LINCOLN CENTENARY CLUB.

Hundredth Birth Anniversary in 1909 to Be Made Memorable.

The Lincoln Centenary association was recently organized at Chicago with a view of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, Feb. 12, 1809, in a manner that will command worldwide attention.

The charter members include some of the most widely known professional and business men of Chicago. They are representatives of the various clubs, the Association of Commerce and the Illinois Manufacturers' association. Lieutenant Governor Lawrence Y. Sherman and Mayor Fred A. Russe are among them.

The purpose of the organization is to make the Lincoln centenary observance an event of international importance.

Plans were suggested for a permanent memorial to the memory of the emancipator in the form of a great building—a temple of patriotism. It is believed there are a sufficient number of patriotic citizens who revere the name of Lincoln to make the raising of at least $1,000,000 for such a purpose a matter of no difficulty. It is hoped to raise a large portion of the money in one dollar contributions.

It is proposed to devote one week to the celebration of the Lincoln centenary. Governors, congressmen and widely known men from every state in the Union will be invited to participate, and the same formal invitation will be extended to admirers of Lincoln and former associates of Lincoln in all parts of the world.

Chickens to Ring Chime of Bells.

A chime of bells operated by 8,000 chickens is the original plan of James Prickett of Saginaw, Mich. On the floor of the chicken house he will place a metallic table, which will be connected with the chiming far above in the tower by an insulated wire. The pecking of the 8,000 roosters and hens, Prickett declares, will set up a vibratory motion in the table, which will start a powerful electric motor in operation. This motor in turn will release the spring controlling the chiming, which will then begin to ring. Thus all the chickens on the farm will know that dinner is on and while they are dining will have music to whet their appetites just as the actresses do along the Great White Way.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

CAMPAIGN YEAR

AND

THE YEAR 1908 WILL MAKE GREAT HISTORY

Probably no year since the Civil War has as great influence upon the United States as the coming year. The Presidential contest, both for nomination and election, involves much more than mere party rivalry. It involves the approval or rejection of the great economic reforms which mark the beginning of a new epoch in American history. It is a fight affecting every man, woman and child, and upon which the interest of the whole world is focused.

WELCOMED IN RUSH BY HIS OLD FRIENDS

Charles Vettors Returns to the Scenes of His Childhood in Noble Township

Charlie Vettors, of Brandywine township, returned home Monday evening from Rush county, says the Greenfield Star, where he had been spending a few days with friends. Saturday he met quite a number of old friends in Rushville and surrounding country. He also met a number of leading politicians of the district, among whom were Thomas E. Davidson, of Greensburg, who is seeking the nomination for congress; and Mr. Campbell, of Richmond, another well known partyworker. While in Rush county he was the guest of former friends in Noble township, where he spent most of his early life, and where he has many friends who are always glad to meet him and extend to him the welcome of their homes.

CATARH IS CURABLE. Successful Experiments in Abating and Curing this Disease

Catarrh is an entirely unnecessary disease and should not be tolerated for a single day now that Hyomei is so generally known and has made so many cures in Rushville and other towns.

Modern science has disproved the old theory that catarrh was a blood disease. It is a germ trouble, and the remedy is Hyomei, which medicates the air you breathe, killing all catarrhal germs.

As there is life and health in the air of the pine forests, filled with fragrant and healing balsams, so there is life and health in breathing Hyomei.

So sure is this prescription to cure even the worse cases of catarrh, that Johnson's drug store sell it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not do all that is claimed for it.

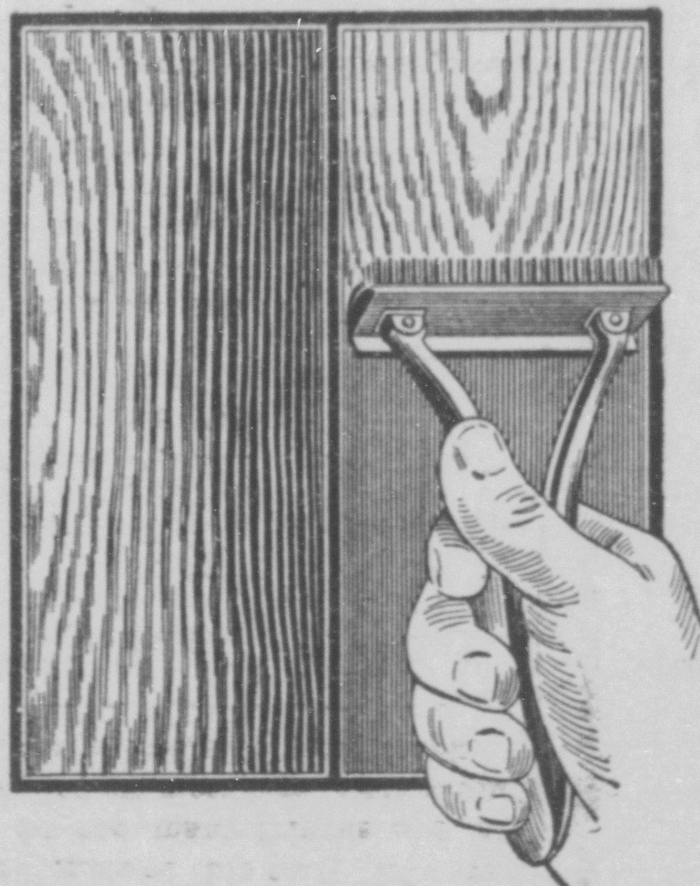

—William Gordon has returned from Anderson, where he was visiting Harvey Blackledge, who has been suffering with appendicitis, but is much improved. Mr. Blackledge has many relatives in this city.

CASADAY HIGH LIFT GANG PLOW

Read the following letter

Rushville Ind., March 2d, 1908

South Bend Chilled Plow Co., South Bend, Indiana.

Dear Sirs:—

I bought one of your New Casaday High Lift Gang Plows of your agent, E. A. Lee, Rushville, in the spring of 1907 and liked it so well I have placed my order for another plow this year.

I considered this plow has them all beat in lightness of draft, convenience in handling and the quality of work it does. The tear is at ease by being in perfect line of draft.

Can recommend it to all who contemplate buying a gang plow.

Respectfully,

S. M. POSTON.

If You Get a Wireless From Your Tooth

Remember Nyal's Toothache Plugs stop toothache instantly, also obviate it by filling the cavities, excluding food, etc., which accumulates, decomposes, forms an acid and facilitates decay. They temporarily FILL and PRESERVE the teeth prior to the insertion of permanent fillings. Can be inserted with toothpick and remove when desired, but unlike so-called toothache gums and waxes, they do not melt, come out, mix with the food and upset stomach. Superior as a toothache remedy—no burn, no blister.
